Photoshop tutorials
are pretty vast.
From retouching to graphic design to web design, there are enough topics to cover. You can start with any of the following tutorial guides: See also: What is Photoshop, Photoshop Elements, and the success of Photoshop, Adobe

created an

Photoshop was designed for the professional graphic
designers and

photographers.
Photoshop Elements
was designed for consumers and
hobbyists. However,
in recent years, the
software has been developed further
to include features
found in the professional

version, and more.
Although Photoshop
and Elements are capable of
performing similar tasks, you need to understand their differences to know
if it is better for you to use one of them.

This guide will teach
you how to choose between Photoshop
and Photoshop
Elements. Adobe
Photoshop is a Creative Cloud-only
service, which means it can only be accessed from a Mac or a PC running Windows. You can't use Photoshop Elements on a Mac, and you can only access Photoshop through the Adobe Creative Cloud at no extra cost. You can't open a file in one and edit it in the other, unless you have both of the software tools installed on your computer. But if you do have Photoshop Elements on your computer, you can also create images and save them in Photoshop Elements format for personal use. When it comes to design and photography, Photoshop is the software that most of the designers and photographers use. It is a very robust and very popular software, so you can't ignore it. Note that Photoshop Elements is simply a "graphics editing" tool. It doesn't provide the same degree of control over your creative output as Photoshop. Read the guide in detail to know more about Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop: Recommended by

British Cycling head coaches call on Olympic cyclists to support COVID-19 campaign

Published: 24 March 2020
The head coaches of Team

GB's Olympic cycling squad have been asked to take part in a new campaign to support the UK's efforts to tackle COVID-19. British Cycling's Olympic cycling head coach,

Dave Brailsford,
along with his fellow coaches Neil Stephens and Kyle Bennett, were asked to support the #OlympicKithood
campaign. The team must be willing to wear the #OlympicKithood

badge and say their
name and support the campaign. A
photo of them
wearing the badge
is now on the British Cycling website and they will be

publicising the #OlympicKithood
campaign on social media and online in
the build-up to and
at the Olympic Games.

Spokesperson for British Cycling Joe
Toal said: “As head coaches of Team GB's Olympic cycling squad, we are asking for everyone within the squad to get involved with this campaign. The UK faces a challenging period in the battle against COVID-19 and we would love to see our athletes and coaches wearing this badge to show their support.” Toal added: “Team GB’s lads will be going through a huge amount of stress as they prepare to compete, and we hope by showing their support for the cause, they can keep their heads up and focus on the task at hand.”

British Cycling is working on a number of measures to help athletes and coaches remain fit and healthy, including advising young athletes to be sensible when they join the team for the 2020 Tokyo Olympics. Toal said: “We’re doing a lot to keep our athletes fit and healthy during this period, and ensuring that they can still do the right things to get the best results.”

“We’ve always been committed to building a strong and healthy cycling team, and there will be a range of measures in place to ensure athletes can be the best they can.” Q: How to

Multi-criteria
decision analysis for health care
resource allocation
of patients with

diffuse large B-cell
lymphoma with 6
years of follow-up:
An economic evaluation in Turkey. Diffuse
large B-cell
lymphoma (DLBCL)
remains one of the most common

subtypes of non-Hodgkin lymphoma in the world.

Medical oncologists are expected to make decisions about allocation of health care resources as well. Decision making is a process that includes all steps from choosing to acting. A critical step in decision making is criteria setting, which includes identifying, defining and prioritizing indicators that need to be assessed. The aim of this study was to apply multi-criteria decision analysis (MCDA) in order to clarify the resource allocation decisions of health care providers for

DLBCL patients. The MCDA was used in order to assign weights to the indicators which were included in the context of DLBCL disease model. Finally, a ranking decision matrix was applied for ranking patients. A total of 24 experts from different stakeholder groups participated in the criteria setting process. A total of 10 indicators were identified which were also relevant for patients and cost determinants. Three different models were generated according to a preference hierarchy of the experts. A model that included risk factors of recurrence and progression of disease, disease-related mortality, and costs of disease, health care costs of disease and health care providers was ranked first. The final decision matrix showed that the first choice for treatment was chemotherapy with R-CHOP regimen and the second choice was PBSC transplantation.

When the results of the study were presented in a comparative form to treatment strategies, PBSC transplantation was identified as the best treatment

strategy. FILED NOT
