example, a user can operate a media streaming device via a web browser or other program executing on a computer at the remote location. As stated, people are often consuming streaming media on a device, such as a personal computer or laptop. In particular, media services, such as Netflix, Youtube, and the like, allow users to download or stream content to mobile or desktop devices. However, due to the large volume of content that are available on the internet, new media content is being introduced at an extremely high rate, i.e. the introduction of new media content is outpacing the ability to consume the same. There remains a need to
