This news, to his many victims, will come as a rude awakening. "Maybe I'll get a couple of new followers now," said Butt triumphantly, as he took his seat on the famous pile of cow pats. A crowd of reporters and cameramen gathered around him. "I've got quite a few followers already," he told them. "I've been quite active on Facebook and Twitter for quite a long time." Butt was congratulated by his mentor, the much-loved former trailblazer and leader of the Mockney Jihad, Chas Skeldon. "Congratulations, Chaz," said Butt. "You've got to get a little bit better at crosswords for this one to be worthwhile." Chas, whose ideas about the ideal average tweeter had become the de-facto instructions for the modern-day SmearMaster, settled himself down to a volume of the Times newspaper. "I can't quite get these little crosses to stop falling into the cells," he complained. "It must be the weight of the paper, I suppose." No one gave any sympathy to Chas, who was in a foul mood because his own services to the Undercover War On Islam were no longer needed. He had had a bad day. "I think I've got a couple of new followers," he told
