Pogo | Watch Free VideosQ: deleting a file with c# in one of my applications I needed to delete a file which was in the location of a given path. In case of the folder not exists, then I created a file in the above folder and deleted it. This worked perfectly in all scenarios except one - when the code is running on a different user account. How should I change this code, so that it deletes the file/folder/file only when it is running on its own account, i.e when the application is running under the context of the logged in user? Thank you A: Use File.Delete() Creates the specified directory, but only if it does not already exist. instead of File.Create It's been a year since the American Dream Land Dinner Theatre in Britt, Georgia, released the first production of their "Mixed Grill" series. Since then, the American Dream has had fun and surprising things happen that will make your whole season change. And now, that's set to happen all over again. After a year off, the American Dream will be returning to the stage for its third season of "Mixed Grill" shows. This year, the American Dream takes on the
